Input Sought on District Calendar

Last week we launched a survey that requests employee and community feedback on the 2016-2017 school district calendar. State legislative changes to how a school day is calculated offered options for improving student education.

Based on feedback from the District Calendar Planning Committee, two calendars were created that provide regular “Design Days,” or dates when teachers will have the opportunity on their campus to train across their grade level and subject. These are days when there are no students in the classroom and the training is driven by your campus need.

This survey is an opportunity to choose between the two calendars, A and B, each has two options for semester lengths. This year was the first time that we utilized two semester dates for secondary and elementary grades. One unanticipated outcome was that retirees who choose to retire mid-year were impacted.
